1. Background for Requirement

The backdrop for telling the story of Lt. Barksdale is the faithfully recreation of a portion of the young Lt.'s boyhood home. The parlor was the family center for relaxed conversation about any and everything. Lt. Barksdale's parents were very influential in the development of their children's lives. They taught them that they could do or be anything. Mother Barksdale was the most influential as she was a school teacher while father was the Postmaster, Store owner and operator of one of the largest plantations in Rankin County, MS.
